Natural bathroom splendour with Tile Africa

NATURAL MATERIALS AND neutral tones transform a bathroom into a fresh and uplifting space that offers refuge from the outside world while tiles, such as sandstone, in shades of vanilla, ivory and warm honey are ideal as one can create endless designs and experiment with different textures.

"Neutral shades are particularly soothing and complement the look and feel of a natural bathroom," says Kate van Niekerk, marketing manager of Tile Africa.

"Gone are the days where one tile in one colour is used throughout a bathroom. Large tiles, still very popular amongst designers, are being mixed with smaller tiles," she adds.

The trend is towards larger format tiles such as 600mm x 600mm-sized ones for the bathroom floor and 600mm x 300mm for the walls.

A few rows of mosaic tiles and pebbles as a border give a bathroom wall an instant design lift and the distinctive features of mosaic sheets allow for endless variations of textures and colours.

"Match the natural look by including wooden vanities in rich deep tones and bamboo, wicker or leather accessories," says Kate.
